

Management

Management

Safety, Health and Environmental Management

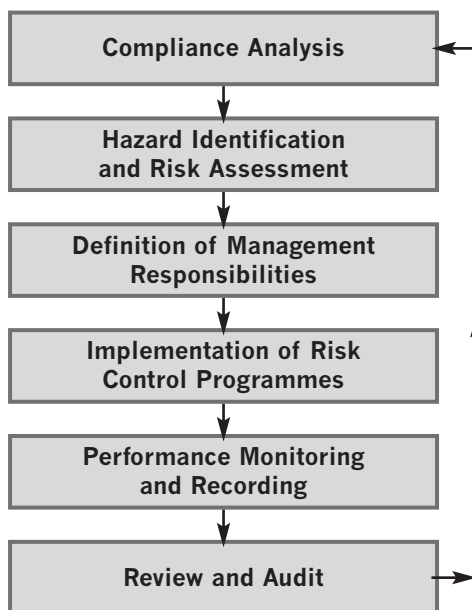

It's Your Business

It is a mistake to believe that accidents and incidents only occur in unusual circumstances. The 'it cannot happen to me' approach. In most cases everyday tasks and common equipment are involved with potentially severe consequences for the individual and organisation concerned.

Protecting employees, visitors and the environment requires forethought and planning. Developing and implementing appropriate health, safety and environmental management procedures doesn't have to be expensive, time consuming or complicated. In fact, compared with the costs incurred in the event of problems, proactive management of SHE issues makes good business sense. Safer and more efficient working practices can reduce costs whilst protecting individuals and the business alike.

Control Process

The raft of health, safety and environmental regulations in place applies to all organisations regardless of size. The difficulty is often in identifying how these relate to different situations and in designing a strategy to suit. First Environment provides support to organisations in implementing integrated control processes as follows:

Training

Increased awareness throughout an organisation goes a long way to ensuring that risk points are identified and control strategies implemented more effectively. First Environment provides subject specific training and awareness sessions to operators and management for client organisations.

Design and Project Support

Detailed specification of the services required by contractors assists greatly in ensuring that environmental performance objectives are met whilst controlling cost. First Environment writes specifications for tender to assist our clients in procuring equipment and suppliers for SHE control and management programmes. Expert advice is provided to support new build, process design, remediation and refurbishment projects to meet and improve on environmental targets.

Research

First Environment has undertaken research projects for USA and UK organisations and institutions to further develop knowledge in specific subject fields. Our independence enables projects to be devised from sound scientific principles and allows us to impartially consider all technologies available.

Corporate Support

First Environment provides support to businesses and organisations of all sizes. We have assisted in devising corporate policies from single issue subjects through to complete health and safety policies. Flexibility, expertise and independence enable us to provide the level of support required to determine the best solution for our clients' requirements.

It's Our Business

It's our business to deliver consultancy support services to meet the requirements of our clients. We value our independence as this sets First Environment apart and has enabled us to identify significant process improvement and cost savings for many clients by being able to consider all available options.

Our goal is to be the supplier of choice for specialist consultancy services on health, safety and environmental issues by delivering technically robust independent advice through a dedicated professional team.

We look forward to working with you.

Head Office

First Environment Limited
Radio House
Aston Road North
Birmingham, B6 4DA, UK

Tel: +44 (0)870 240 2945
Fax: +44 (0)870 240 2946
www.first-environment.co.uk

